(Paperback) - Oberon Zell Product
Description A life-long passion for color through design and experiment inspire author and photographer Juan Carlos Nieto as he journeys along the eastern edge of the Andes Mountains in Argentina, Bolivia, Chile and Peru. Blanco: The Color of Adventure is the inspiring tale of a family on a multi-year, round-the-world adventure and the universal message of color. Their mission is to celebrate the color of design and culture, discovering and photographing many colors in perfect proportion. They come to understand color beyond the physical, to experience beautiful color vibrations, to know that beauty is always in the context of the journey, and to embrace their full potential as colors. Blanco: The Color of Adventure is a celebration of color, a classic journey, and the journey within. Publisher's Description Based in Argentina, Juan Carlos Nieto began his adventure to become a photographer and writer with the goal of capturing and documenting the beauty of culture and design, applying the principles of color harmony and creating powerful images that convey a universal message. The Biography of Juan Carlos Nieto Juan Carlos Nieto was born in Sanguinare, Argentina. He studied in Montevideo at the University of Engineering, but moved to the United States, where he lived for nine years, working with several clients and also opening a business specializing in photography, interior design, architecture and industrial design. During that time he learned and developed his craft, while capturing pages of his photographic series which were exhibited in Buenos Aires and New York City. Juan Carlos Nieto left the U.S. in 2004 to enter the world of South American adventure where he has been living for the past six years. As he traveled across Argentina, Bolivia, Peru, and Chile, he met and befriended Larry Hood, an English engineer, who was serving in the Peace Corps in Chile. After a brief stay in Peru, Juan Carlos Nieto joined Larry Hood, and decided to journey across South America over the years 2004-2008. On their journey, the two friends studied ancient Incan ritual and design, art, traditional cuisines, and shared the adventure through nightly riddle songs. They stayed with a variety of host family members and worked with rural communities throughout their travels, and discovered new colors, cultures, designs, and discoveries each time they took the road. They documented their time and journey with photographs, music, and prose written upon each experience. Today,
