Apoptosis and cell cycle regulation in murine megakaryocytic tumor cell line. Apoptosis has been reported to be involved in regulation of the cell cycle in both normal cells and transformed cells. Recently, we have shown that apoptosis is induced in murine megakaryocytic tumor cell line HMC-1 by radiation in a time-dependent manner, and that the radiation-induced apoptosis is blocked by protein synthesis inhibitor, cycloheximide. This study was designed to determine the molecular mechanism of radiation-induced apoptosis in HMC-1 cells. Radiation inhibited cell growth and induced apoptosis in HMC-1 cells, whereas colony formation was not inhibited. The level of cyclin dependent kinases (cdks) and proliferating cell nuclear antigen (PCNA) increased in the late phases of the G2-M transition. The expression level of CDK1 was decreased, while the expression level of CDK3 was increased. Radiation induced activation of caspase-3, -8 and -9, and the cleavage of PARP. In contrast, radiation did not induce the expression of proapoptotic genes, such as Bax or Fas. These results indicate that apoptosis is induced in the late phases of G2-M transition in radiation-induced G2-M checkpoint bypass murine megakaryocytic tumor cells, and that the checkpoint is lost by a decreased expression of CDK1.

Q: Assign properties to a local variable inside an anonymous function I want to store a result of a function (here is the code to do it):

static void Main() { string result = MyFunction(); } static string MyFunction() { Console.WriteLine("Hello World"); return "Hello"; }

The only way I found to achieve this is:

```
static string MyFunction() { string result = "Hello World"; return result; }
